

Guide for Asylum Seekers in the Erzgebirgskreis

Foreword

Hello, or as we say here in the Erzgebirgskreis, “Glück auf!”

Your journey from your homeland has brought you to Germany, to the Erzgebirgskreis district in the state of Saxony. Saxony is one of the 16 states that make up the Federal Republic of Germany and is situated in the east of the country. The Erzgebirgskreis is one of Saxony's ten districts. The district's administrative seat is the town of Annaberg-Buchholz.

In Germany, the right to asylum is a fundamental human right. We therefore have an obligation to provide accommodation for you. There are several central accommodation facilities in the Erzgebirgskreis, as well as a number of apartments spread throughout the entire district.

One of these will be your new, temporary home. How long your stay with us will be has not yet been decided.

This brochure is designed to help you settle into these new, unfamiliar surroundings. You will find important information and contact details for representatives at various authorities, institutions and information centers, as well as other guidance you may find useful.

Your local contact will also be happy to answer any questions you may have.

For further information on this topic, and on the development of accommodation for asylum seekers in the district, please visit www.erzgebirgskreis.de.

1. Life in Germany*

1.1 Political and legal order

All residents of Germany must abide by the central, fundamental principles of the country's political and legal order. The most important legal foundation for life in Germany is the Grundgesetz (Basic Law). This is the constitution of the Federal Republic of Germany.

Fundamental rights

Articles 1 to 19 of the Grundgesetz define the fundamental rights of the individual against the state. Some of the most important of these fundamental rights include:

- Protection of human dignity
- Right to life and physical integrity
- Equality of all people before the law
- Freedom of belief
- Freedom of expression
- Freedom of assembly
- Occupational freedom
- Right to property and inheritance
- Freedom of the press

Article 20 describes the key concepts upon which the political system of the Federal Republic of Germany is based:

- Federal state
- Democracy
- Constitutional state
- Social state

Federal state

Germany is a federal state that consists of 16 individual states:

- | | | |
|---------------------|-----------------------|----------------------|
| - Baden-Württemberg | - Hessen | - Saarland |
| - Bayern | - Mecklenburg- | - Sachsen |
| - Berlin | Vorpommern | - Sachsen Anhalt |
| - Brandenburg | - Niedersachsen | - Schleswig-Holstein |
| - Bremen | - Nordrhein-Westfalen | - Thüringen |
| - Hamburg | - Rheinland-Pfalz | |

*Source: www.bamf.de

Democracy

Germany is a democratic state. This means that all state authority is derived from the people. It is exercised through:

- Elections
- Votes
- Legislative bodies (parliament)
- Executive bodies (government and administration)
- Judicial bodies (courts)

The Bundestag (parliament) is the assembly elected to represent the people.

Constitutional state

Germany is a constitutional state. Decisions made by the state (the government) are bound by its laws. The state's actions can be controlled by the courts. For example, the Federal Constitutional Court can check whether newly approved laws conform with the constitution. This protects the fundamental rights of the country's citizens and regulates the actions of the state.

Social state

Germany is a social state. This means that every citizen must work to earn money to pay for the things they need. However, the state helps people who cannot do this or can only do so to a limited extent. A range of state benefits are available. The most important of these include compulsory social security, unemployment benefits and child benefit.

1.2 Political participation and parties

Every citizen has the opportunity to participate in political life in Germany and to influence politics – locally, statewide, nationally and on a European level.

They can do so by joining political parties, interest groups, citizens' initiatives and trade unions. The parties present candidates for election to local, state, national and European parliaments. These include:

- Municipal and town councils
- District councils
- State parliaments
- The Bundestag
- The European Parliament

Germany's political parties have a wide range of different positions and political programs. You can find out more about their positions on individual topics on their websites.

Elections

Elections in Germany are general, direct, free, equal and secret. This means:

- General: All men and women who are German citizens can vote and be elected, provided that they are at least 18 years old.
- Direct: People elect their representatives directly or from a list, and not via electors.
- Free: No one may put pressure on voters to select a particular candidate. Voting is not compulsory.
- Equal: Every vote has equal value.
- Secret: Only the overall result is published. The decisions of individual voters remain secret.

1.3 Freedom of religion

The Grundgesetz (the constitution) guarantees religious freedom for every person in Germany. Religious freedom includes the right to choose your religion freely and to practice it with others, as well as the right to have no religion at all. The Grundgesetz states that there is no state church. The state must be neutral toward all religions. It cannot favor or discriminate against any religion. However, the state and religious groups do work together.

Religious groups

The overwhelming majority of people in Germany are Christians: around 26 million people in Germany belong to the Catholic Church, and there are around 25 million Protestants. But Orthodox Christians, Muslims, Jews and Buddhists are all also part of German society. Islam is the third-largest religion in the country with around four million believers.

2. Life in the Erzgebirgskreis

2.1 The Free State of Saxony and its districts

The fundamental principles of Germany's values and laws also apply at a district level. The Free State of Saxony is divided into ten districts and three urban districts:

- | | |
|---------------------|-----------------------|
| - Bautzen | - Meißen |
| - Chemnitz | - Mittelsachsen |
| - Dresden | - Nordsachsen |
| - Erzgebirgskreis | - Sächsische Schweiz- |
| - Görlitz | Osterzgebirge |
| - Landkreis Leipzig | - Vogtlandkreis |
| - Leipzig | - Zwickau |

2.2 The Erzgebirgskreis

The administrative seat of the Erzgebirgskreis is Annaberg-Buchholz. The highest point in the Erzgebirgskreis, and the whole of Saxony, is Fichtelberg at 1215 meters.

District council

The district council makes decisions on all matters within the district. It consists of 98 members, who are elected by the citizens of the district. The chairperson of the district council is the district administrator. The Erzgebirgskreis district council was elected on 25 May 2014 for a five-year term.

Economy

The Erzgebirgskreis' rich supply of natural resources generated a huge economic boom in the area over 800 years ago. This helped the district to develop into a strong industrial center. A large proportion of the companies based here operate in the toolmaking, mechanical engineering and electrical engineering industries. The mining industry also led to the emergence of regional Christmas traditions, handicrafts and customs that live on to this day in the Erzgebirge. This is why the Erzgebirgskreis is also known as "Christmas Land".

Religion

The Erzgebirgskreis is a predominantly Christian region.

2.3 Border areas

Asylum seekers can move freely throughout the federal territory of Germany once a three-month period has elapsed. You may only enter and stay in the EU state in which you have applied for asylum – i.e. the Federal Republic of Germany (see also section 55 and the following of the Asylum Procedure Act). Leaving the country is therefore an offense and is punished accordingly.

Part of the border of the Erzgebirgskreis is also the national border between Germany and the Czech Republic. Border crossings are clearly indicated and must not be crossed by asylum seekers for the reasons above.

2.4 Buses and trains

The Erzgebirgskreis is the largest district in Saxony by area. Having a well-organized, comprehensive public transport system is therefore very important here.

The following companies operate within the region:

Bus: Regionalverkehr Erzgebirge GmbH (www.rve.de)

Train: Erzgebirgsbahn (www.erzgebirgsbahn.de)

⇒ *Timetables can be found on the companies' websites.
Alternatively, please ask your local contact.*

How to use public transport

- ⇒ You need a valid ticket in order to use public transport (e.g. trains, buses). Tickets are often sold by the bus driver. Travelling without a ticket is normally punished with a fine of 40 euros.
- ⇒ Be at the bus stop at least five minutes before the scheduled departure time. Indicate to the approaching bus that you would like it to stop and have not just stopped at the bus stop for a rest. This gives the driver time to recognize that you are waiting for them.

- ⇒ If you have to change buses at some point during your journey, tell the driver when you board. They will make sure that you do not miss your stop.
- ⇒ Find a place to sit or something secure to hold on to. The driver will always attempt to drive carefully and considerately, but even typical, expected movements of the bus could cause you to fall and injure yourself.
- ⇒ Once you get off the bus, only cross the road when the bus has departed and you have a clear view in both directions.
- ⇒ Please respect other passengers. Eating and drinking are not permitted on buses.

2.5 Accommodation options for asylum seekers in the Erzgebirgskreis

Asylum seekers assigned to the Erzgebirgskreis are accommodated in central shared accommodation facilities or in apartments spread throughout the entire district.

3.1 The lower accommodation authority

The lower accommodation authority for the Erzgebirgskreis is responsible for enforcing the Residence Act, the EU Freedom of Movement Act, the Asylum Procedure Act, the Asylum Seekers' Benefits Act and all relevant ancillary and state laws.

The lower accommodation authority for the Erzgebirgskreis is therefore responsible for:

1. Regulating the residence of foreign nationals in line with the intended purpose of their residence, in accordance with the Residence Act and the regulations regarding the residence of recognized refugees
2. Verifying EU residents' right to freedom of movement, and that of their dependants, in accordance with the EU Freedom of Movement Act
3. Receiving commitments to invite foreign nationals to the Federal Republic of Germany and following the approval procedure prior to their arrival in accordance with section 31 of the Residence Ordinance
4. Regulating asylum seekers' residence in accordance with the Asylum Procedure Act, admitting asylum seekers into the Erzgebirgskreis and arranging accommodation for them, and regulating the residence and departure of former asylum seekers and foreign nationals with exceptional leave to remain
5. Providing benefits to foreign nationals entitled to them in accordance with the Asylum Seekers' Benefits Act
6. Working with various authorities to enforce the relevant laws regarding foreign nationals

The lower accommodation authority for the Erzgebirgskreis is based in Annaberg-Buchholz, the district administration's administrative seat. There is an additional branch in Aue.
